To whom it may concern

This is to recommend Diana Bagrationi, whom I have known since she came to New York with her family.

Highly educated, a gifted singer, personable, and a social benefactor, she has won my admiration! An organizer of many charitable events, she is a person of great kindness, visiting, helpful to those in trouble, of a cheerful and forgiving disposition in the face of vicissitudes that she has been through. She has been a pillar of various organizations in the Russian Community. I mention the journal New Review and its Russian film festival, the International Society for the Saving of Russian Monuments and Landscape, the sick in the Children's Institutions of Georgia, the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, the various churches in this area and individuals too numerous to list, visiting them and aiding them with the greatest generosity and cheerfully shouldering some of the ingratitude that occurs in the Russian diaspora.
